LVC celebrated the inauguration of its 17th president, Stephen C. MacDonald, on Saturday, April 30.

MacDonald was appointed by a unanimous vote of the Board of Trustees. Since 1998, he had served as vice president for academic affairs and dean of the faculty. In May 2004, he accepted the role of acting president after former President G. David Pollick left the College to become president of Birmingham-Southern College in Alabama.

"I am honored by the trust placed in me by the College's Board of Trustees, the search committee, the faculty, students and staff of the College," stated MacDonald. "In my seven years here, I have learned how gifted our faculty members are and how devoted they are to our students. The students continue to impress me with their constant willingness to learn and grow. It is with great pleasure that I accept this challenge."

"For good teaching rests neither in accumulating a shelfful of knowledge nor in developing a repertoire of skills. In the end, good teaching lies in a willingness to attend teaching is a certain kind of stance, I think. It is a stance of receptivity, of attunement, of Shila Williams became interested in studying abroad during her high school years, but it was her time at LVC that allowed her to pursue that interest as she studied in Salamanca, Spain during the fall of 2002. According to Shila, the opportunity allowed her to gain a sense of who she is, her priorities and who best fits within those priorities, while also giving her a different perspective about the world. In addition to her time in Spain, she also traveled to Italy and Switzerland with fellow senior Kate Ruhl during her senior spring break.

After graduation, Shila will attend the University of Pittsburgh's graduate school to study social work. She wants to work with older adults, with the dream of becoming the administrator of a nursing home. After two internships at Kindred Place in the spring of 2004 and 2005, she knew her heart would be devoted to social work. After beginning school as an elementary education major, Shila never dreamed that she would work with older adults. With the encouragement of her professors, she became a psychology major, with a minor in Spanish. This was a change that would lead her life in the most wonderful, fulfilling direction she could ever imagine.

Along with studying abroad and having an internship, Shila was very involved at LVC. She attended chapel since freshman year, and, during her senior year, planned the Christian formal. She was also president of the campus Christian organizations and served on the search committee for a new chaplain. She participated in the Lebanon Valley Education Partnership (LVEP), worked in the College Relations Office since her freshman year, and was also a resident assistant.

LVC has given Shila many opportunities to discover a great deal about herself. Through the College's study abroad program, internships and activities, Shila has been able to play an important role in the LVC community. She strives to give back to the College that has given so much to her.

Gabriel Johnson believes that biology is not a science, but more of an art. "It's about being creative and designing experiments -- appreciating the diversity of life," he said. Gabe majored in biology, and plans to go to graduate school to further study plant evolution. The decision was a simple one for Gabe, who has been interested in plants since he was young and even worked as a florist during high school and over breaks. He looked forward to attending college, where he could study the science of plants, not just their aesthetic qualities.

When looking at schools, Gabe noticed that LVC had two botany professors, and that most professors had been at the College for a while. "They must like the place," he remembers thinking, which helped him to make his choice. During his time at LVC, he participated in summer research and worked as an assistant in the greenhouse. In addition to working within the science department, Gabe also worked with Bible study and served as the historian for Freedom Rings.

One lesson Gabe has learned in his four years at LVC is, "It's not what you study that's important. It's the fact that you are studying. All majors are equally important."

elissa Ulrich has a lot of good things to say about LVC and her memories from time spent on campus. Anyone who knows Melissa or just recognizes her from around campus would say that she is always busy and always smiling.

During her years at Lebanon Valley, she worked hard to earn her double major in math and finance. Serving as the president of the Math Club, she was able to help organize the Math Olympics for local fifth graders. This day provides a fun way for students to look at math while playing sports. In addition, she also helped to put together the Math Quiz Bowl for local students.

Melissa has been involved in the community and on campus through other facets as well. She participated in the Relay for Life and was on SAAC, the Student Athletic Advisory Committee. As the candidate for SAAC for the softball team, she helped to bring educational programs to the athletes on campus as well as organize community service activities for the softball team, which included donating time to clean the Quittie.

When asked about her favorite place on campus, Melissa smiles and is quick to say, "the softball field. I've had so many good memories – both in terms of the game itself and the people I've met."

Besides all of the studies, services and activities that Melissa participated in at LVC, one of the biggest events of her life happened on campus. She met her future husband, Kevin Poole, a senior who majored in music education.

With his long list of activities and friendly personality, it's hard for anyone on campus not to know and like Scott Payonk. His friends agree that he is one of those people who isn't afraid to go an extra step to make someone laugh. Most people would probably recognize him from his many musical and theatrical endeavors. For four years, he participated in the marching band, where he played the drums and served as the drumline captain for two years. His many theatre productions include: Harvey, Guys and Dolls, Lonestar, A Midsummer Nights Dream, Crucible, and The Mystery of Edwin Drood. "The theater feels like a second home to me. I have been there for hours on end, and learned a lot about myself in that time."

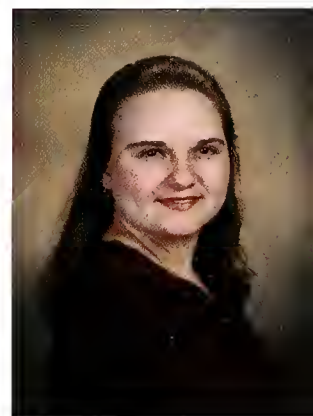

Scott was one of the founding members of the LVC chapter of Iota Phi Theta, where he served as president his senior year. He also played a big part in student's lives on campus through service as a peer advisor for one year and a resident assistant for two years. In addition, he has participated in the campus radio station and has been involved in numerous intramural sports.

Through his time at the Valley, Scott has met many people that have influenced his life in positive ways. "To narrow it down to one person who influenced me the most is impossible. Dr. Atkinson, my advisor, Kevin Pry and Steve Spiece of Wig and Buckle, and Jon Wescott in student services have all had a key part in my experiences."

After graduation, Scott plans to go on to graduate school and get his degree in either special education or student services. He'd like to thank all of his family and friends for their love and support that helped him to make it through college.

Megan Deveney decided to work with children with special needs based on her experience with a volunteer program at East Pennsboro Area High School. "My aunt is a special education teacher for my district's middle school," she said. "We came up with a volunteer program to send high school students to the middle school to spend one day a month helping my aunt and her students. Working with these students with special needs confirmed my aspiration to be a teacher."

"I think the most rewarding aspect of teaching students with special needs is knowing that you have a specific goal for each student, and you don't give up until that student has met that goal. Finding the appropriate instructional technique to meet each student's individual needs and finally watching a student succeed makes all the work well worth it," Megan said.

Lebanon Valley College's education program was a large factor in Megan's decision to attend. "I was impressed with the campus -- I liked the location, size and facilities of LVC. But I loved the idea of having a certification in both regular education and special education, which a lot of smaller schools do not provide."

In addition to working with special needs students, Megan played basketball her freshman year, and was on the swim team her sophomore through senior years. She was a member of the Pennsylvania State Education Association and Circle K. Outside of school, she was involved in 4-H and the Horse Club, and she shows her Arabian horses for the Eastern Amateur Arabian Horse Show Circuit.

Matthew Wensel decided to study music because of how much he enjoyed it while growing up. "Several members of my family were musicians and they stressed the importance of music to me at a young age," he said. Matthew also credits his many music teachers for encouraging him to continue with his musical studies.

Over his four years at LVC, he was involved in numerous activities, including Chamber Choir, Concert Choir, Handbell Choir and Jazz Band. He was president and treasurer of the LVC chapter of the AGO and also served as the music director for the Wig and Buckle presentations of Sweeney Todd and The Mystery of Edwin Drood. In addition to all his campus activities, Matthew served as the choir director at St. Paul's Catholic Church in Annville. He plans to continue serving as a church musician after graduation, and will graduate with two degrees -- a B.S. in music education and a B.A. in music (concentration in organ and sacred music). He also plans to pursue a career in music education and would like to teach private lessons.

Matthew chose Lebanon Valley for several reasons. "I visited many different colleges and universities and found that I felt most at home at LVC," he said. "The size of the campus and student population and the facilities were all part of the appeal. Most importantly, however, was how much the music faculty made me feel welcome, especially my organ instructor, Dr. Shelly Moorman-Stahlman."

Those who know Ryan Kitko are quick to say that he has affected LVC in many positive ways. Through S.A.F.E. (Student Action For the Earth), he helped to start a recycling program on campus. In the fall of 2001, over 42 cubic feet of paper was recycled, and the program has continued to grow in leaps and bounds. Ryan also presented other ideas to the administration, such as placing a windmill on campus that would be an educational tool for many of the College's science courses. During his years with Freedom Rings, he started the "coming out" door that is seen in the College Center during National Coming Out Day, and Jeans Day, a day that supports those in the homosexual community.

In 2004, Ryan became financially independent from his parents, and worked at MJ's Coffeehouse and the College Center Desk to support himself -- all while maintaining a 3.7 GPA as a biology major with a chemistry minor. Although he has endured a great deal, Ryan has persevered and become an inspirational role model for many of the students at LVC.

After graduation, Ryan plans to attend Evergreen State College in Olympia, Washington, to pursue a master's of environmental studies and then go on to obtain his doctorate. His goal is to teach at a small, private liberal arts college, much like LVC.

*"Success is a process, a quality of mind and way of being, an outgoing affirmation of life."
Alex Noble*

Kate Ruhl knew that she would never get a better opportunity to explore the world other than during her time at LVC. She took advantage of the College's study abroad program twice. After studying in New Zealand for a semester, she went for another semester to Italy. She served as a study abroad peer advisor for two years and promoted the program to other students considering the experience. Because of her love of traveling, she also spent her senior spring break visiting Italy and Switzerland with fellow classmate Shila Williams.

SAGA (Students Acting for Global Awareness) is another one of Kate's passions. The group sponsors programs and events about issues usually not addressed on campus. Kate lived in a tent on campus when the war in Iraq first began, helped coordinate breast cancer awareness events, and organized teach-ins about the war in Iraq and the last presidential election. She feels very passionately about the issues that the US media doesn't address, and felt that SAGA gave her an outlet for the causes she was interested in. She also co-directed and co-produced LVC's production of The Vagina Monologues, and helped with the Vagina Warriors campaign that honored local women for promoting women's rights.

Kate has also worked in various offices across campus, and served as the layout editor for La Vie Collegienne during her senior year. After graduation, she hopes to attend graduate school to obtain her master's degree and eventually become a professor. She also aspires to work with an international organization, as well as spend a couple of years living in a foreign country.

Adam Gingerich liked the fact that Lebanon Valley had actuarial science, and he liked that he would probably be able to play football but LVC wasn't his first choice. "My parents forced me to visit LVC because it was close. I wanted to go to the University of Rochester, however, I really liked LVC when I visited the campus."

During his time at LVC, Adam was a three-year letter winner for the football team. In his four years, he did not miss a single practice. "I really had no excuse not to practice. I just had very little respect for guys who sat out because they didn't feel right or they had a little bruise," he said. "I have the rest of my life to heal. I might as well take the beating while I'm able."

Sharon Hurst of Career Services was always impressed with Adam's can-do attitude. "He can stick with a difficult major which requires massive hours of study, and maintain his commitment to a varsity sport, and he's the only player never to have missed a practice," she said.

Adam majored in financial mathematics and economics. After graduation, he would like to find an actuarial job somewhere in the Northeast, preferably in Philadelphia, Hartford or Boston. If he could pass on one lesson to up-and-coming Dutchmen, it would be "it goes way too fast, make sure you take advantage of every opportunity you have."

Those students who've received scholarships may want to thank Ricky Weinhoffer. As student manager of the Phonathon program, he might have made the call that made their Vickroy possible. "The biggest secret is that there is no secret," Ricky said about raising money for the Valley Fund by calling alumni. "We have basic scripts, but you really just need to talk to alumni. We all chose LVC for a reason. You really just need to talk to them and be yourself."

Ricky, a music business major, became student manager for the Phonathon based on "his hard work, dedication and love for the College," said Jamie Cecil, assistant director of annual giving, who worked closely with Ricky. She said that he fit the criteria for a Phonathon worker, describing him as "an excellent representative of LVC who demonstrates excellent organizational and communication skills."

In addition to his work with the Phonathon, Ricky participated in Sinfonia, Market Square Church Choir, Chapel Choir, Concert Choir, Marching Band, and Music and the Entertainment Industry Students Association. He also hosted a radio show at WLVC. He says that a lesson he's learned during his four years at LVC is, "Take advantage of every opportunity; make sure you have no regrets."

While attending LVC, Rocco Pastorella served in many different roles within the student body. Beginning his freshman year, he became involved with the class activities, serving as class treasurer for the first two years and as class president for the last two years. He organized fundraisers such as the Underground delivery, candy sales, and class t-shirts. Rocco has also participated in student government for four years, and ended his time at LVC as president of the organization. Within this position, he spent a lot of time planning Dutchmen Day, homecoming and the winter formal. He also served on the president's committee, the food committee, and the student organization budget hearings to help delegate money to the organizations.

When he wasn't volunteering time to student organizations, Rocco was a student supervisor for the College Center Desk. He participated on the Red and Blue Crew that supports LVC athletes. He played football for three years at the Valley and did track for two years. He also served as the president of Phi Lambda Sigma. "I met a lot of great people at LVC, especially my fraternity brothers who made this college experience awesome."

Rocco graduated with a degree in elementary education. "It's great to see kids succeed when you're helping them, especially to know that you had an impact on their life. It might have been something little to you, but it was a big deal to them."

The team opened their season by defeating Gettysburg 7-3 and ended the season with their best record (4-6, 3-6 MAC) since 2000. The Dutchmen went 3-6 in MAC play to finish in a four-way tie for seventh in the conference standings. Senior defensive end Lucas Robinson was named to the All-Middle Atlantic Conference Second Team. Also, sophomore offensive lineman Kevin Hallman, junior wide receiver Luck Rendine, and junior tight end Gino Trosa earned a spot on the MAC All-Academic Team.

The team's last regular season game resulted in a shut out putting them at 14-6 for the season, placing them as the third seed in the Commonwealth Conference tournament for their post-season. Overall, the team earned its first-ever ECAC title and finished the season with its most wins since going 18-3 in 2000. Sophomore forward Stephanie Marguglio and senior defender Lindsey McCormick were named to the STX/NFHCA Division III South Atlantic Region First Team, both also were named to the All-Commonwealth Conference First Team. Also, five LVC women were named to the Middle Atlantic Conference (MAC) Fall All-Academic Team: Melissa Brong, Katie Pawlewicz, Kym Weed, Missy Shultz, and Lindsey McCormick.

After making a name as one of the top teams in the ECAC Northeast Conference, the ice hockey team moved into the highly competitive ECAC West Conference this season.

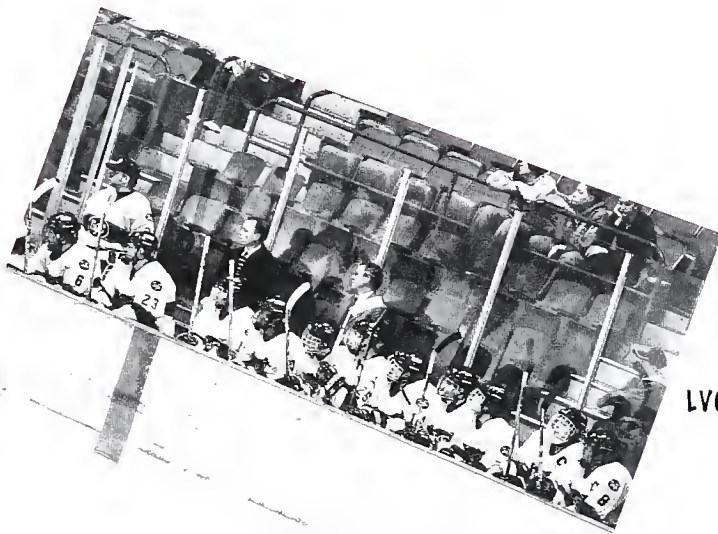

With a young team and a new conference, the season proved to be an up and down seasaw. Having Craig Vardy, Justin Todd, Jeff Smith, Alex Beatrice, and Rob Scales named to the ECAC West Honor Roll, this being a team high point, the guys ended the season at a low finishing the last game 5-2 to Manhattanville.

They finished the season 5-19-1 and 1-11 in conference play.

The women's volleyball team finished the season with their second victory over Dickinson College, ending an outstanding season with a record of 24-5.

After the team's 3-0 loss to Juniata in the semifinals, they were able to grab the second seed in the ECAC Southern Region Championships. Also, the team finished the year with its fourth-straight 20-win season as well as qualifying for the Commonwealth Conference playoffs for the fourth year in a row. The team's ECAC berth was its second in school history, while it advanced to the championship game for the first time.

The LVC Cross Country team started the year strong under the leadership of two seniors, Sterling Dunlap and Matt Hawk. With the effort of two sophomores, James O'Brien and Jeremy Ansbach, the foursome helped the team have a successful run. The season opener for the Dutchmen proved that they were ready to compete, as they finished 4th among 10 teams. Ansbach was LVC's top finisher with a time of 30:28.8. Later in the season, the Drew Invitational hosted 79 competitors. Kiner finished 7th and the team finished 3rd. Two runners were named to the MAC all academic team: Josh Kiner and Jeff Slomski.

The LVC's men's and women's swimming teams opened their 2004-05 season at the Middle Atlantic Conference Relays.

The meet featured 10 events, with each having two male and two female competitors in each relay.

They performed well in the 400-yard butterfly, the 800-freestyle, and the 400-yard breaststroke. The team finished 4th. Fourteen members of the LVC swimming team were named to the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference (MASCAC) Winter All-Academic Team. The men's and women's teams concluded their season at the Middle Atlantic Championships with the men's team coming in 8th and the women's team coming in 9th.

LVC had a strong season with many athletes showing they were competitors in their field.

Crystal Gibson qualified for the NCAA Division III Championships early in the season, in high jump with a height of 5-7 1/4. Kelly Hilkerts joined her at the Division III Championships after qualifying for it in the 400-meter hurdles. Jamie Greenfield finished 3rd in the season-opener at Susquehanna and was named Co-Athlete of the Week for her performance. The LVC Invitational proved to be successful for the Dutchmen, as they finished first in 14 events. Many school records were broken during the season.

Baseball finished 7th in the Conference with a 19-16 record. The team returned all but three starters from the previous season, so the year started with high expectations. Robert Nordall was named D-3 National Collegiate Baseball Writers Association Pitcher of the Week for his performance in Florida for the team's season opener. Ron Weaver was named team Honorable Mention Hitter of the Week with 15 hits and 11 RBIs and 9 runs. He was also named MVP. Matt Sanders was named as one of the two winners of the 2005 Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Corporation Giant Steps Award Winners, finishing 2-3 with a team-best 2.66 ERA.

With many different competitors and teammates, LVC's golf program has shown that they are a force within the Commonwealth Conference.

Senior Ryan Ogurcak led LVC to win the Moravian Fall Invitational by finishing 4th. Halfway through the Commonwealth Conference Championships, Ogurcak finished 4th, Steve Thomas was in 14th, Mike McNeff and Mike Wilhelm were tied for 21st, and Max Linn finished 34th. The final day of competition proved to be testing for Ogurcak, but he defeated Moravian's Bryan Ott to capture the championship in the first playoff hole.
